

General and veins surgery Varicose Veins treatment

Description:

Varicose veins or varicosity often develops due to the genetic predisposition running in the family but lifestyle and work habits also contribute to their development. Varicosity causes pressure in the limbs plus it is visible and often comes up to the surface of the skin. However treatment of the varicose veins is not important for the patient from the esthetic point of view but mainly because of health reasons. Varicose veins are often painful and the areas where they develop are susceptible of inflammation. Plus when care is neglected there could easily develop thrombosis or crur ulcer with all their dangers.

Technologies:

In the area of venous laser surgery varicose veins in all stages are treated – from tiny delta veinlets up to developed illness with thick winding veins. There are many procedures available to help patients with varicosity problems. After evaluation your doctor recommends the most suitable one accordingly the condition.

Operation in total anesthesia – By the endoscope invagination technique we are capable of solving the most advanced state of varicosity. Into the vein channel we insert a special string onto which the vein gets attached and by a fine technique called invagination the vein is pulled out. The advantage of this technique is its smaller aggression to the surrounding tissue. That means faster healing with smaller bruises and minimal post-surgery complications.

Mini-operation in a special local anesthesia (so-called tumescent anesthesia) is the cure for a medium stage of the varicose veins. The procedure is completely ambulatory and hospitalization is not required. A vein is damaged by small cuts and by a special technique it gets closed and pulled out or a laser string is inserted onto which the damaged vein bakes. The advantage the method compared to the classical operation is the significantly shorter time of disability, lowering the post-surgery pain and especially the incomparably better cosmetic effect.
